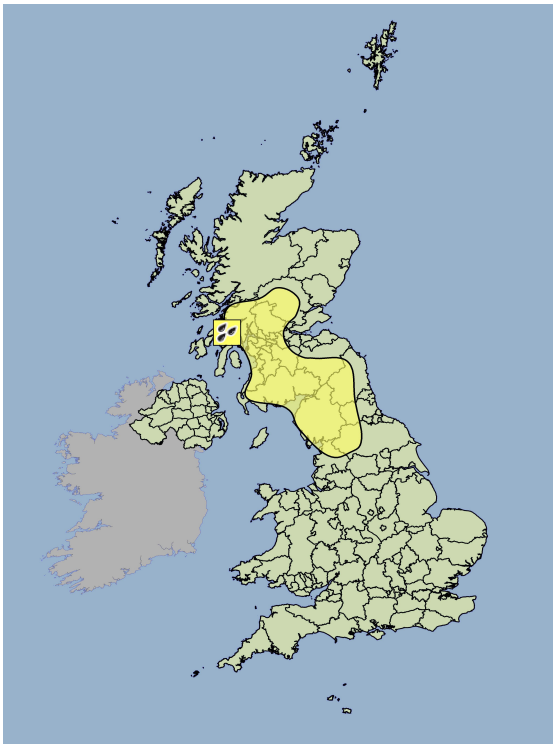
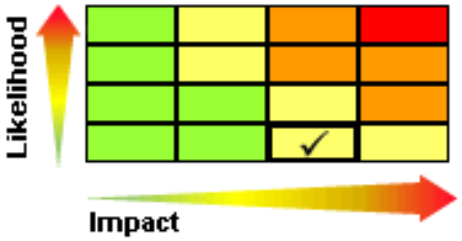
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A frontal zone will extend northeastwards across much of the UK during Sunday night and Monday, bringing with it spells of heavy rain as a strong, moist southwesterly flow develops. Further heavy rain is then likely later in the day as another frontal zone moves southeast across the region.

Rainfall totals of 20-30 mm are possible quite widely over the higher ground within the warning area and with over 50 mm possible locally. Given that saturated ground conditions and high river levels are expected following the weekend's rainfall, further flooding is possible. The warning will be kept under review, with a further likely on Sunday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 06:00 on Mon, 07th Dec 2015 until 23:50 on Mon, 07th Dec 2015

Spells of heavy rain are expected to affect parts of Scotland and northern England through the course of Monday. Please be aware, given the saturated nature of the ground and high river levels, that further localised flooding is possible along with disruption to transport.

This is an update to the warning issued on Friday to include a larger area, encompassing a broader region of southern and central Scotland and parts of northern England.
